

Ken Moscaret, Esq. is one of the top experts in his field. He graduated from Georgetown University Law Center in 1980, and was admitted to practice in California the same year. From 1980-1990, Mr. Moscaret was primarily a business litigator in Los Angeles practicing in California state and federal courts. He has trial experience.

Since 1990, Mr. Moscaret has analyzed the reasonableness of over $1 billion in legal billings in a variety of cases. He has been involved in well over 150 large fee disputes, and has been an expert witness in court, deposition, and arbitration. He testifies on both sides of large fee cases for law firms, clients, insurance carriers, and both plaintiffs and defendants in fee-shifting cases.

Mr. Moscaret is frequently retained by major, Top 250 U.S. law firms to testify in large, complex cases involving seven-figure or eight-figure legal fees. He has partner references at many large law firms. For instance, Mr. Moscaret was retained in 2007 by the largest law firm in Los Angeles to testify about millions of dollars in legal fees for defending a corporate policyholder-client in a major, complex lawsuit in federal court in California.

Mr. Moscaret gave key attorney fee expert testimony in 2008 in the huge Enron securities class action litigation in federal court in Houston. Lead plaintiff's counsel submitted a $700 million attorney fee request in that case. Mr. Moscaret was the sole "lodestar" reasonable fee expert testifying in the Enron case about reasonable hourly rates and hours billed. Mr. Moscaret testified alongside several nationally-prominent law professors and retired federal circuit judges who were co-experts with him, including law professors from Columbia University Law School and Harvard Law School. Enron is the largest securities class action lawsuit in U.S. history, and one of the largest business lawsuits generally ever litigated in this country.

The U.S. District Court in Enron relied heavily and favorably on Mr. Moscaret's expert opinions in making its fee award. The federal judge in Enron described Mr. Moscaret as one of the "nationally prominent experts on fee awards" who was "highly qualified to testify about attorneys' fees and market rates." The court's opinion was 209-pages long. Visit www.EnronFeeExpert.com for more details.

In 2005 and 2008, Mr. Moscaret was invited by the JAMS organization to train all of their retired federal and state court judges in California and nationwide regarding attorney fee awards in large, complex cases, through a combination of live seminars at JAMS offices and DVD video and audio instructional materials.

Mr. Moscaret was hired in 2006 to conduct a litigation management review of the 270-attorney legal department for the County of Los Angeles, the nation's largest county, to examine how the Los Angeles County Counsel's Office managed and resolved its most difficult, high-stakes litigation. He reported his expert findings to the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors.

During the 12-year period from 1996 - 2008, Mr. Moscaret helped supervise outside counsel relations for the General Counsel's Office of the Los Angeles Unified School District, a major public entity in California. In that capacity, Mr. Moscaret reviewed and approved the invoices of about 50 different law firms which were submitted to L.A. Unified for payment each month, including many major law firms. During those 12 years, Mr. Moscaret reviewed well over 30,000 law firm invoices in all manner of cases from outside law firms that work for L.A. Unified. He also helped L.A. Unified negotiate retainer agreements and hourly rates with its outside law firms, and assisted with law firm RFP competitions and outside counsel selection at L.A. Unified.

Mr. Moscaret created a first-of-its-kind legal blog called myLawCoach designed to help consumer clients manage all the "dollars-and-cents" business aspects of their attorney-client relationships. Mr. Moscaret's blog delivers practical tips and advice to the types of individuals who serve as jurors in court.

Mr. Moscaret frequently speaks and publishes in his field, and has been interviewed for feature stories by the media.
